

Do your employees suffer from Attitude-dicitis? video

A woman and a man are sitting at a table in a restaurant. A waiter is standing at the table, inquiring, "Would you like something from the menu?" The man replies, "I don't know what I want."

The waiter walks over to a sandwich board sign that says, "Today's special" and points to it. The man shrugs his shoulders. The waiter looks impatient and annoyed.

A narrator says, "Do your employees have attitude-dicitis?"

A sign appears, which read, "Attitude-dicitis. A condition causing open displays of impatience towards customers."

The narrator continues, "You need to check out our online library of courses at Empower Learning Solutions to cure your employees of this condition."

www.empowerlearn.ca